

Realistic Cosplaying With Aeromax!

Halloween is just around the corner, but then every day is Halloween in our house. My kids love dressing up and we love encouraging it, so I wanted to give you all a heads up about a company we just found. We procured a NASA flight suit costume for the kids and I was shocked at how well made it was!

Check these pics out. My kids were fighting over this thing:

The jumpsuit is an exact copy of an adult jumpsuit, so the material is thick and sturdy. All of the patches are embroidered, too! What really blew me away was that I got it in Jason's size, yet Lois (18 months younger) could wear it perfectly because of all the Velcro straps that help resize the waist and arms.

Aeromax is the company that made the suit. They specialize in realistic dress-up clothes and accessories. The costumes are more like tiny replicas than the cheap costume-in-a-bag stuff you find in most stores. They have everything from medical scrubs to S.W.A.T. gear.

Next costume for our geeklings? Jockeys. Definitely the jockeys.
